Since Taking Tanlac Almond Says He Feels as Well as He Ever Did.

"If you had seen me before I began taking Tanlac you would hardly believe me to be the same person," said A. P. Almond, a well-known seed merchant of 211-3 Peters st., Atlanta, Ga. "For more than a year, I suffered from indigestion, constipation, and general nervousness. After eating I would have gas on my stomach and was constantly belching up sour, undigested food. I was very nervous, my liver was sluggish and I suffered from biliousness and felt so bad that I could hardly attend to my business."

"I heard so many people praising Tanlac that I began taking it, and by the time I had finished my second bottle I had gained nineteen pounds. I never suffered with indigestion and am not nervous like I was before. I sleep well and get up feeling fine and ready for a hard day's work."

"Tanlac is sold in Memphis by Warnock Drug Co. and Weiss' Pharmacy and all the leading druggists in practically every city, town and village in America."

CHAMBERS' FIRST CAPTIVITY

Friends and Fair Ones Overwhelm Flyer Who Wears Many Decorations for Helping Sweep Huns From Air.

What Baron Richthofen with his flying circus could not do, what scores of German flyers failed to do, what they would have given all they possessed to accomplish—that is, bring down and capture Maj. Reed Chambers, Memphis' leading ace and third in rank among the aviators of America, was brought about in less than a minute Thursday afternoon in the Peabody hotel lobby, when the boyish young hero of the air surrendered to his cronies and friends and after half a hour's hugging and handshaking was whisked away in a high-powered automobile under a shower of hail of hair and rosy cheeks, in whose hands he seemed a willing prisoner.

Unannounced save to his closest friends and with modesty characteristic of the clean-cut flyer for freedom, Maj. Chambers came to the city of his adoption after 20 months of service over the battle lines of the western front. On his breast he wears many decorations in the power of the allied commanders to confer. He is officially accredited with having downed in action seven hostile airplanes and unofficially is reported to have disposed of at least four more. Of these latter he does not speak, inquiring along the line bringing the usual "We won't discuss that" of the true hero loath to discuss his exploits from fear of seeming boastful.

Maj. Chambers wears the distinguished service cross with four oak leaves, signifying that he has engaged in four adventures, any of which would have won for him that coveted honor. The cross de guerre with two palms and two stars, surmounted by the medal of the Legion of Honor, highest decoration the French confer, also is worn by the Memphis. A silver star on Maj. Chambers' left breast signifies that he is recognized as one of the 10 leading flyers of the American expeditionary forces. As a matter of fact, he stands third in that distinguished company.

"Delightful!" was about all the boyish-looking young hero could say on his arrival in his home town and too busy in the effort to shake hands with those who have made his name immortal in the light of history.

In command of the 34th aero squadron of the American air service, Maj. Chambers arrived in Memphis Thursday from Mitchell field, Minnesota. L. I. He landed in New York city on the last day of May, stepping on American soil for the first time since October, 1917.

Rescued Rickenbacker.

As a member of Eddie Rickenbacker's flying circus, Maj. Chambers won his greatest honors and once saved the former auto racer's life when the latter was hard pressed by a superior force of enemy flyers. Rickenbacker and Maj. Chambers became pals in their experiences as comrades in arms, and after both are discharged from the service they plan to go into the automobile business in Los Angeles, Cal.

Maj. Chambers will return to New York next Monday and will receive his discharge, after which he will at once begin plans for re-entry into the automobile business. For five years previous to his enlistment he was a salesman for the Memphis Overland company.

Probably Maj. Chambers' most daring exploit was the fight with a squadron of Fokkers and a Hanoverian plane which had surrounded Rickenbacker and were about to succeed in their concerted effort to drive the American ace to the ground and capture him alive. Maj. Chambers soared far above the enemy planes and snatched the downed straight downward into the midst of them, firing as he darted downward. One of the Fokkers fell out of commission back of the American lines and the squadron flew to cover well beyond the German first line trenches.

While still a lieutenant, Chambers was sent out to protect an observation plane one day during the fighting around Chateau Thierry. Several other flyers were in the party. Suddenly a fleet of Fokkers appeared apparently from nowhere and began overhauling numbers of the allied flyers. The Americans with their quick flyers, outnumbered, two American planes were shot down. Lieut. Chambers, however, with his companion, dodged the clumsy Hun, helped the observers complete their task and escorted both planes back to the American lines in safety. For this he was awarded the Croix de Guerre and for later exploits he was given two palms and two stars.

In the Argonne forest drive Maj. Chambers won his D. C. He downed a Fokker after a terrific battle with seven attacking hostile planes. For similar action during the Argonne drive he was awarded three oak leaves.

Wins Legion of Honor.

As a climax to all the honors won the French government finally showed its appreciation by making the young Memphis a member of the Legion of Honor, the highest military decoration in its power to give. The honor has been conferred on but four Americans, two of whom, by the way, are from Memphis—Maj. Chambers and Lieutenant-Commander Cecil Sellers, who recently returned from overseas duty.

Leaving a remunerative position as retail salesman for the Memphis Overland company, 411 Madison avenue, Chambers first enlisted in the Chickasaw Guards. He made a splendid record in service along the Mexican border with the Chicks and returned to Memphis a finished soldier.

The lure of the air got into his veins after his return to Memphis and enlistment in the aviation service followed. Maj. Chambers was among the first to finish the instruction afforded under Capt. Christie at the local aviation school, and when it was discontinued he left his training at the North Memphis Driving Park field and went with a number of others to the flying field at Randolph, Ill.

His proficiency and coolness of head there soon won for him recognition and he was one of the first of Uncle Sam's flyers to go across when America got into the war.

He sailed in October, 1917, as a first lieutenant in the 94th aero squadron. Five months after his arrival in France Chambers was sent into action and in less than 30 days he had downed his first plane. Soon thereafter Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker was ordered back to America. Capt. Lieut. Chambers was made flight commander of the famous unit of flyers. On Nov. 1, just before the signing of the armistice, Chambers was made a captain and on May 12, 1919, just before he sailed for America, he was made a major.

Maj. Chambers throughout his service overseas remained with the famous pursuit squadron, the 34th, recognized as the premier flying unit of the American expeditionary force. From its members were chosen the three leading aces of America, Maj. Chambers, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker and Maj. Raoul Lufbery, who downed 17 Huns before he himself was downed and killed after a terrific battle against overwhelming odds.

Maj. Chambers is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Chambers, of Los Angeles, Cal. His parents are at present in Memphis. His father, who is now in New York to visit them as soon as he is mustered out. Together they will proceed to Los Angeles, Cal., where they will make their future home.

FOWLER WILL DIRECT SUNDAY SCHOOL DRIVE

M. C. A. building Thursday evening. Dr. E. E. George, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., chairman of the executive committee for the campaign, said that the Sunday school workers of the city are determined to make the Sunday school work this summer the most interesting and helpful that it has ever been, and to accomplish this purpose the attendance must be made to surpass all former records for the summer season.

Mr. Fowler said Friday morning that he did not know that he had been considered for the place, and that while his time was fully occupied with other duties this summer, he would take great pleasure in helping to make the Sunday school drive the greatest success possible. He will begin organizing his forces at once.

The campaign will be started Sunday, July 6, and continue until September. A mass meeting of Sunday school workers will be held at the Court Avenue Presbyterian church Thursday night.
